EC Puts 10-Day Freeze On Some Farm Subsidies

Compiled by Our Staff From Dispatches - State of the second BRUSSELS - The European Robert Community announced Wednesday a 10-day freeze on some agrifrom running out of money.

Later Mark scheduled to discuss the financial crisis when it meets Friday, and it may extend the freeze, according to a spokesman who declined to be

> Officials from several delegations said that if the freeze is ex-tended through year's end, the EC: will save $255 million to $297 mil-and the second EC officials said payments would be withheld on a broad range of items, including dairy products, wine, cereals, beef, olive oil and sugar. They said the subsidies involved are those paid to private export companies that buy produce and ship it abroad. The only farmers likely to be directly involved are those who belong to Italian olive oil cooperatives that do their own exporting, the officials said.

The freeze underscored the financial crisis facing the European Community and its $13.6-billion farm program. With a strict limit w much each country contribntes to the budget, the trading group has run out of cash because the agriculture program requires antomatic outlays regardless of how much is produced.

The commission has been warning member governments and the European Parliament for months that funding would run out before the end of the year.

News of a subsidy freeze came first from Athens on Monday, but the decision was overruled Tuesday by Gaston Thorn, president of the commission. However, the pressure of events compelled the commission to decide on the emergency action Tuesday night.

Christopher Tugendhat, the budget commissioner, said that the commission was forced to act quickly and under difficult circumstances Tuesday night to avoid what he called pre-emptive measeres by third parties. Political sources said this was a reference to the commission's alarm that producers and traders would anticipate any freeze and rush in with applications for advances. The European Commission's decision to suspend payments of farm export subsidies met with an angry response from members of the European Parliament, meeting in Strasbourg, France, to debate a supplementary budget.

While the impact of the Soviet missiles were deployed, Mr. Za-myatin replied: "You have under-discern, the growing likelihood that discern, the growing likelihood that a compromise will not emerge from the Geneva arms talks before the December deployment deadline has heightened public sentiment in favor of delaying the missiles to provide more time for negotiations. The Reagan administration and Chancellor Helmut Kohl's government have rejected any postpone-ment because they believe it would relax the pressure on the Russians to reach an agreement

But polls show that more than two-thirds of West Germans want a six-month moratorium on the missiles an idea that has been staunchly endorsed by many leading figures among the opposition

Lebanon Sets Political Talks For Next Week

By Thomas L. Friedman

New York Times Service BEIRUT - The government of President Amin Gemayel formally invited the leaders of Lebanon's warring factions Wednesday to a national reconciliation conference

However, heavy fighting beween the Lebanese Army and Druze militiamen outside Beirut, as well as reservations put forward by some of the parties invited to the talks, raised questions on whether the meeting could be held on time.

In one of the worst violations of the cease-fire that went into effect Sept. 26, the Lebanese Army and anti-government Druze militiamen traded fire with heavy artillery and rocket-propelled grenades around the town of Souk al-Gharb, seven miles southeast of Beirut, a Lebanese Army spokesman reported. Army sources said six soldiers were wounded, two of them seriously, in the artillery duel, which began to taper off after sunset.

In the northern Lebanese port Tripoli, at least eight people were killed and 15 wounded in 24 hours of fighting between commu-nists and Sunni Moslem fundamentalists, Reuters reported.) Despite the cease-fire violations, bowever, the government pressed ahead with efforts to convene the national reconciliation dialogue. The state-run National News Agency said that Mr. Gemayel had instructed the governors of Lebanon's different previnces to extend invitations to Lebanese factional leaders in their areas.

The government announced that the venue of the meeting would not he announced until 24 hours before it takes place for security reasons. Besides the security concerns, however, there was still no agreement on where it should be held. The Druze leader, Walid Jumb-

"This resolution provides important support for the United States presence and policies in Lebanon," Mr. Reagan said, "and facilitates the pursuit of U.S. interests in that region on the bipartisan basis that has been the traditional hallmark of American foreign policy."

The resolution grew out of congressional concern over whether the continued presence of the 1,200 marines in the multinational peacekeeping force in Lebanon was in compliance with the 1973 War

Omissions Alleged in Aquino Inquiry

General's Report Said to Ignore Possible Army Role der burns had proved positive on from three years of self-imposed

By Bob Secter Los Angeles Times Service

MANILA - The disbanding Monday of a panel looking into the minder of Renigno S. Aquino Jr. leaves the investigation to govern-ment detectives whose findings to date have been riddled with omissions and inconsistencies, a source involved in the inquiry says.

The man said that some of the conclusions reached by the chief government investigator, Major General Prospero Olivas, "make me sick to my stomach." For instance, he said, the latest confidential report on the case prepared by General Olivas flatly states that Mr. Aguino was shot Aug. 21 by a professional killer, Rolando Galman, although evidence indicates that it could not be ruled out that a soldier was the

The source agreed to discuss problems with the investigation as ong as his name was not disclosed. The new allegation followed a disclosure Monday by the deputy counsel of the investigating panel. The lawyer, Amadeo Seno, said that a test that could show gunpow-

the hands of two soldiers. Military authorities had said that both soldiers were marmed when they escorted Mr. Aquino off an airplane moments before he was shot.

That information was omitted from the Olivas report that was delivered last month to the special investigating commission appointed by President Ferdinand E. Marcos to supervise the Aquino investigation. The report was leaked to the press Monday.

Mr. Marcos had appointed the commission to allay suspicions that the government might try to cover up something in the investigation. But the political opposition said that most panelists were closely ried to the president, and predicted that the panel would produce a whitewash.

When they resigned Monday, the commission members urged Mr. Marcos to revamp it in such a way as to satisfy skeptics. He has promised to consider the suggestions.

Mr. Aquino, Mr. Marcos's chief rival for power, was killed as he was being led by soldiers from an airplane that had brought him back exile in the United States. The Olivas report on the killing shows that the military investigation has been less than thorough, said the source, who has closely studied both the report and evidence in the case.

For example, the source noted, the report concludes that Mr. Galman rushed Mr. Aquino from behind on the airport tarmac and shot him once in the head with a .357 Magnum revolver. The bullet moved in a downward angle. "In order to produce that trajectory, Galman would have to be eight feet tall," the source said. He said the trajectory might be consistent with another theory, not mentioned in the Olivas report, that the shot was fired from an emergency stairway that Mr. Aquino and his escorts had been descending.

The source said that other ques tions included the following: • A suggestion in the Olivas report that Mr. Galman, after firing at Mr. Aquino, was quickly knocked off balance by one of the guards and then hit within seconds (Continued on Page 2, Col. 4)

Lootings in Brazil: A Reflection of a Growing Crisis

There have been measurable increases in the suffering of Brazil's large poor population. The governor's theory has led to bitter public exchanges. "There is a simple lack of authority," said Ruy Barreto, president of the Rio de Janeiro Commercial Association of Brazil. "Brizola doesn't want to crack down on the people who elected him. He is looking for a scapegoat."

The official confusion has contributed to a widespread public sense of impending chaos.

"There is a sense of desperation," said Celio Borja, a director of the Social Democratic Party and president of a Rio de Janeiro bank association. ## Too Many Debt Crises

Reagan and Marcos

Other Opinion

How many more crises can the world's financial system survive? Political stability requires it to survive every challenge, but the odds decline with every new shock. Brazil, with the largest debt of any country, needs help for the second time this year. Argentina, the thirdlargest debtor, also needs another quick infusion. The Philippines appears to need another soon. That three major borrowers ran into trouble shortly after they were supposedly safely affoat should be warning enough that patchwork rescues are not enough.

The developing countries owe private foreign banks, governments and international agencies about $700 billion. Half that debt is Latin American; interest consumes about half Argentina's and Brazil's annual export earnings. The soundest remedy for all concerned is vigorous expansion of the debtors' exports, but that depends on strong economic recovery in the countries that buy their goods, the kind that is visible only in the United States. Other remedies are less certain to work, and all of them are painful.

One would be to surrender to a wave of defaults, to stop throwing good money after bad. The bankrupts, of course, would get no more loans anywhere; the human toll would be ghastly and the political consequences could be revolutionary. Also, the banks that hold their debts would have to be bailed out, at considerable cost to the industrial economies. Huge defaults might not be the end of the world, but they would raise havoc.

a presidential cover-up of the crime.

Mr. Aquino off his plane.

A second option is to continue on the present path, addressing each crisis separately. That worked reasonably well when fewer countries were on the ropes and the world economy was robust, but more than 40 countries are now in trouble and the world economy is sluggish. Individual rescues involve new loans from the International Monetary Fund, which in return demands austerity measures to curb inflation - reduced government spending, restrictions on imports. But how can exports grow when so many countries are reducing imports simultaneously and dragging down growth in more prosperous nations?

A third possibility would be to create a new international mechanism to take over the private banks' loans at a discount, stretch out repayment schedules and reduce interest charges. But private bankers do not want to take losses on their shaky debts. Their governments fear the cost of buying up that debt and central bankers think it unhealthy to postpone the debtors' belt-tightening.

Nonetheless, some concerted action is likely to become necessary. The successive bail-outs of Mexico, Argentina and Brazil have been impressive. An increase in the U.S. contribntion to the IMF, which Congress has been delaying, would relieve some nervousness. But each new crisis casts doubt on the adequacy of what has been done. It raises the costs of doing more and the risks that what can be done the next time will not be enough

A Propaganda War That Both Sides Lose

By William Pfaff

DARIS - Now it is conceded by American officials that the Russians did believe that the South Korean Boeing 747 shot down on the night of Aug. 31-Sept. 1 was an American spy plane. The New York Times reports that U.S. intelligence, having received all the evidence available, finds "no indication that the Soviet air defense personnel knew it was a commercial plane before the attack."

U.S. intelligence is "confident that the Su-15 fighter involved was below and behind the airliner," where ideatification would have been difficult.

U.S. intelligence has reached "general agreement that the Soviet Air Defense force had displayed a poor capacity to intercept aircraft in Soviet airspace, to distinguish between commercial and military aircraft and to identify a plane before shooting it down." These conclusions, the report says, were delivered to the White House two weeks after the attack.

So the Soviet Union has been telling the truth about this: It did not know that the plane was a passenger aircraft. It believed the flight was a hostile intrusion by U.S. military intelligence. It dealt with the plane brutally — as has always been its declared policy. It shot it down.

The last five weeks of frenzied attack and counterattack, by Western governments and Soviet authorities come down to a simple and stupid mistake by a Soviet air defense organization incapable of telling a Boeing 747 from an RC-135 — and, indeed, barely able to find a 747 in the night sky, even after it had been in Soviet airspace for two and a half bours.

There probably are people in Washington and the other Western capitals who will say: So what? It all has produced a glorious victory for the West in the propaganda war.

So it has, so far. If in the future something should come out to substantiate the Soviet claim that this 747 was on an intelligence mission of some nature, the incident will become not a propaganda catastropbe for the United States, but a moral catastrophe. Moreover, if this 747 was on U.S. service, it will eventually come out. Washington cannot keep secrets like that — not any longer.

One prays that Captain Chun Byuog-In, of Korean Air Lines
(which is well known, it seems, for its cost consciousness), was taking the short way home, presuming that even if he didn't get away with it, the worst that could happen would be a forced landing on Sakhalin.

Charles Z. Wick, bead of the U.S. Information Agency, which has made an immense propaganda project of the South Korean airliner affair, says that the affair has provided "an unprecedented opportunity to show the truth, which is the greatest communication asset we have on behalf of the free world against the disinformation of the Soviets. And that's what this contest is all about."

But the truth about the episode, as apparently has been known in Washington since mid-September, is not what America has been telling.

A spokesman for the Department of State has said that whatever the truth of the matter, the position of the U.S. government would not change, since even if the Soviets were not able to tell a 747 from an RC-135 they should have been able to do so, and they thereby reveal themselves to be "negligent or incompetent or both." Yet the attack upon the Soviet Union has not been directed against its incompetence, which surely was no surprise, but against what President Reagan, in his United Nations address at the end of September, de-scribed as the Soviets' "brutal disregard for truth and life."

The weeks since the first of Sep-tember have stunk with brutality and hatred - Moscow's hatred for Washington and Washington's for Moscow. Truth has been told only when it could hurt the other side.

None of this should necessarily surprise anyone who is a witness of contemporary history. But it still commands the power to make a citi-zen of that side which professes to represent justice as well as truth feel diminished.

High Time To Turn Off The Noise

By George F. Kennan Washington — Moscow mi-tially expected that in some areas, at least, reasonable agreements and understandings could be reached with the Reagan administration.

The Soviet leaders expected hard bargaining in arms talks, but they supposed that negotiations would be kept confidential until agreements had been achieved, and that U.S. positions would be carried forward in the "correct," dispassionate and busi-nesslike style used so effectively in earlier years by such fine negotiators as Averell Harriman, Ellsworth Bunker and Llewellyn Thompson.

But even before the South Korean plane incident they had begun to have doubts. Now they seem to have come to the conclusion, rightly or wrongly, that what they are up against in Washington is something much more serious than mere domestic political posturing — namely, a genuine and profoundly rooted ideological commitment against them, which no amount of normal dickering and compromise could change.

And they see this commitment as binding upon an administration which is in the saddle not only for one more year but possibly for another four years after that.

This has far-reaching implications.

If Soviet leaders did not see America as a potential ally, they also did not view it as a wholly committed enemy. If that is the way they have now come to see it, a basic change will be called for in their international relations. Some of the aspects of this change. can be imagined, but not all.

Given the lack of a precedent, Soviet behavior has now become less predictable. A number of the more reassuring things that some of us have had to say in recent years about Soviet intentions and reactions may still have validity, or they may not

All that we can be sure of is that whatever changes may now occur in Soviet policy, they are unlikely to be agreeable; we will probably learn of them only when we see their effects; we will have lost the possibility of detecting and influencing them in advance through the normal processes of diplomatic communication.

Such are the penalties of a relationship so seriously deteriorated as this one now is. What does this say about American policy toward the Soviet Union in the coming period?

There will have to be a recognition that the situation is in several respects one of heightened danger and one that ought not to be permitted to last a moment longer than it has to. A responsible American policy will be one directed to the limitation, and if possible the reduction, of the danger.

There is no room for angry polemics and the many recriminations over things past that have marked recent exchanges. Everyone has made his point; there is no need for repetition. instead there will have to be a search for small steps designed to stabilize the relationship, if only within the present narrow framework.

This requires no dramatization no public airing of disagreements Least of all does it call for summit meetings or other highly publicized encounters between senior figures. It means meeting the Soviet side at normal levels of communication, avoiding discussions over motivation, sticking to the practical business at hand and seeing whether smaller areas of agreement cannot be found, even where the great ones are lacking Will the Reagan administration to which such quiet diplomacy seems to be foreign, move along this path? A great many people at home and abroad will be watching to see. This is the second of two articles. The writer, a former ambassador to the Soviet Union, is professor emerities at the Institute for Advanced Study in

A Test of Alliance Resolve in Arming Europe

THE HAGUE — We are fast approaching the end of a year that many regard as perhaps the most crucial in NATO's history. Much of that judgment derives from the fact that 1983 brings the first acid test of allied resolve to implement, if need be, the deployment half of the December 1979 decision on modernization of longer-range intermediate forces (LRINF). If indeed it ever existed, the day has long since passed when allied governments and NATO planners could develop and carry out collective security policies in a privileged realm shielded from the everyday pressures of domestic politics. Unfortunately, to stretch an American metaphor, nuclear warheads are singularly unsuitable for conversion into pobocal footballs. Yet we have seen a dismaying and growing tendency to make precisely that kind of conversion.

No one should dispute the right of elected officials and other political activists to address public opinion on important issues; on the contrary, it is an essential part of our democratic way of life. But we must be concerned at the use of this right to mislead or, worse yet, frighten the public in the name of educating it.

To be sustainable, any NATO strategy must be politically acceptable. Lately the quest for a politically acceptable military doctrine has become solely focused on the pursuit of ways to reduce NATO's reliance on ouclear weapons. In the abstract, that is certainly a seductive bandwagon. But I do not think it wise to jump upon it.

I am among those who enthusiastically favor strengthening conventional forces and making better use of allied technological superiority to compensate for superior numbers of Warsaw Pact troops, tanks and planes. At the same time I remain impressed with the success of ouclear deterrence in keeping the peace in Europe. However desirable it might be to devise modifications in current NATO strategy, we should not rush to make other arrangements which, in the end, might provide less reliable guarantees against conflict or provoke the psychological separation of Europe from its North American allies. Before seeking to diminish significantly the deterrent part currently played by nuclear forces in the defense of the alliance, the question of whether or not that is something the allies could safely do deserves intense and dispassionate examination.

Allied leaders should be forthright in explaining to their citizens exactly wby we live in a dangerous world and why an apparent loss of Western will to provide an adequate defense would make it even more so.

In so doing, they might make plain that weapons, nuclear or otherwise, do not make war, governments and ideologies do, and we in the West happen to be confronted with an ideology which insists that conflict between differing political systems is historically inevitable.

Delivering such a message is not a happy task. Unfortunately, it happens to be a necessary one if those charged with ensuring that NATO's defenses always remain sound are to have all the tools that are needed to do the job.

NATO must be convincingly seen as political-dedicated to arms control. The negotiating track of the 1979 decision has also received some dismaying public treatment. It has become commonplace to address appeals to both sides to take a serious approach to the Geneva negotiations — as if Washington might not be serious about the talks or would be equally at fault with Moscow should the negotiations fail. I would counsel constant reminders to our publics and to Kremlin leaders that there is only one real obstacle to success at Geneva — namely, Soviet insistence on preserving its wholly unacceptable monopoly on ground-launched LRINF missiles.

False public impressions about the negotiations are fed as well by calls upon NATO to delay LRINF deployments beyond December under the pretext of allowing more time for positive results in the Geneva talks. Such calls ignore the relentlessly cynical use

Moscow has made of the nearly four years it has had to reach an equitable LRINF arms control agreement. They stand logic on its head by suggesting that a sudden collapse of allied politi-cal nerve in the face of Soviet intransigence would somehow induce Moscow to make concessions. They overlook the Soviet rejection of the U.S. offer to eliminate all ground-launched LRINF missiles, an objective that all members of the North Atlantic Assembly must endorse. They also overlook the Soviet rebuff of the U.S. offer to curtail deployments to any equal number acceptable to Moscow, and the fact that deployment on the NATO side will be spread over several years and can always be reversed.

Appeals to delay the installation of Pershing-2 and cruise missiles are sadly misguided. Their effect is to reinforce Moscow in its obduracy, to confuse allied public opinion and to damage prospects for early progress at Geneva. International Herald Tribune.

South African Interlude For Strange Bedfellows

By Helen Suzman

CAPE TOWN — The referendum to be held in South Africa on Nov. 2, in which white voters will be asked to say yes or no to the question posed by the National Party government — "Are you in favor of the implementation of the Constitution 1983 as approved by Parliament?" — has several hizarre aspects.

Martin Luther King is proving to be nearly as controversial today, 15 years after his death, as be was in the midst of his extended cam-To begin with, the "colored" and paign for racial justice. At issue now, bowever, Asian people who are to be included is not his cause - civil rights for black Ameriin the new constitutional proposals cans. On that there exists a remarkable nationwill not participate in the referen-dum, and the blacks, 70 percent of al concensus. Rather, the issue is the desirabilthe total population, are excluded both from the referendum and from "Constitution 1983." The new parlia-ment, if set up, will consist of three ity of a federal boliday to mark his birthday. For millions of Americans who believe that his appeal to conscience helped narrow the embarrassing gap between American ideals and American reality, the national holiday is houses - a House of Assembly for fully justified. We have bolidays celebrating the whites, a House of Representatives for the "coloreds" and a House of Delegates for the Asians.

Blacks, the government explains, are already accommodated by local contributions to American freedoms, honoring our first president and so on. But we have government structures in the urban areas, and nationally by a franchise in their ethnic rural "homelands."

Needless to say, blacks living in townships like Soweto, close to Johannesburg where many of the mil-lion people are third-generation ur-ban-born, laugh at the quaint concept that they should exercise their right to vote in distant tribal areas in which they have never set foot. And homeland leaders like Chief Gatsha Buthelezi of KwaZulu have expressed outrage that blacks are to continue to be denied any say in the parliament that passes the laws that govern their lives.

It is hard to comprehend how

South Africa can today in 1983, when racial discrimination is outlawed throughout the civilized world, repeat the cardinal mistake made way back in 1910 when the Union was formed.

Another curious aspect of the ref-erendum is the lineup of the yeses and noes. On the yes side are loyal SUPPORters of the National Party government, since the new constitution is its brainchild. But also announcing support are some influential Englishlanguage newspapers, traditionally anti-government, together with a considerable number of Englishspeaking South Africans who usually back the official opposition, the Progressive Federal Party, which has fought the oew constitutional proposals from the time of their first appearance in Parliament.

whites only. (The PFP doesn't want apartheid at all. The government wants apartheid administered by whites, "coloreds" and Asians.) There are several reasons for the defection of the people who would normally go along with the PFP. They have fallen for the line put across by government spokesmen (who have a virtual monopoly of the state-owned radio and television) that the new constitutional proposals are a "step in the right direction," a line that has been enthusiastically endorsed in some diplomatic circles particularly by those in favor of "constructive engagement" with South Africa. This is because of the inclusion of the "coloreds" and Asians. Defectors also cherish the bope that the government has an agenda that will eventually bring blacks into the new dispensation.

Two factors are ignored. First, the powers to be given to the "colored" and Asian houses are so limited that those minorities will not be able to change in any way the three laws they most abominate: the Race Classification Act, which reduces them to second-class citizens, the Group Areas Act, which defines the right to own or occupy property on a racial basis, and the Separate Amenioes Act, which lays down that public amenities may be segregated.

Second, including blacks in the new dispensation would be totally incompatible with the government's plan of "grand apartheid," to which it firmly adheres. This involves the creation of "industrial and its black state. ation of "independent" black states and the concomitant deprivation of South African citizenship for blacks ethnically connected with such states. Four "independent" black states have already been created, with a fifth in the pipeline, and some 8 million people have already lost their South African citizenship.

Apart from the step-in-the-right-direction school of thought, many people who admit that the new pro-posals are badly flawed and are likely to fail say they intend to vote ves on Nov. 2 because they believe that if a no vote prevails the government will fall, Mr. Treumicht and his Conservative Party will come to power and reform will be frozen for all time. In fact, the danger of a takeover by Mr. Treumicht is grossly overrated. A recent public opinion poll showed him with only 12.8-percent support. Moreover, the forces for change in South Africa - economic forces, the process of black urbanization, international pressure — will continue de-spite Mr. Treumicht, whatever the outcome of the referendum. One thing is clear. Many black South Africans will interpret a yes vote as approval for their exclusion from the new parliament and an endorsement of spartheid. The credibility of moderate black leaders who eschew violence will be undermined, and racial polarization and the possi-bility of conflict will increase.

something other than baseball during the wasteland that stretches like the Sahara between the World Series and spring training. Before that long night descends, let me note that the Baltimore Orioles, who have the best record in baseball during nearly the last 27 years, are one of two American institutions of consistent excellence.

pany. Washington is fiddling with that, so the Orioles may soon have cornered the market on quality. Considering the way some lessthan-excellent players are paid to-day, Joe DiMaggio has a point when he says that if he were negoti-ning back got the numbers confused this year when he said his goal was to gain 1,500 yards or 2,000, "whichever comes first." Amazingly, the beauty of baseball is not apparent to everyone. When baseball gave lifetime passes to the 52 hostages released from Iran, a football fan asked, "Haven't they suffered enough?" Some critics say baseball is just another opiate of the masses, another of the distractions that American society produces so prolifically, diverting attention from the class struggle or the Iowa caucuses.

BALTIMORE — This writer But not all distractions are created has agreed to think about equal. Some numb the mind (alcoequal. Some numb the mind (alco-hol, the Iowa caucuses); others engage the mind (baseball). It is said that baseball is "only a game." Yes, and the Grand Canyou is only a hole in Arizona Proof of the genius of succent Greece is that it understood bases ball's future importance. Greek philosophers considered sport a re-ligious and civic — in a word, a moral — undertaking.

Sport, they said, is morally serious because mankind's noblest aim is the loving contemplation of wor-thy things. By witnessing physical grace, the soul comes to understand and love beauty. Seeing persons compete courageously and fairly helps emancipate the individual by educating his passions.

Professional sports can be a mel-ancholy business because an athanchory outsiness because an au-lete's career compresses so much of life's trajectory into a short span. But, as the Pirares' Wilkie Stargell-said, "The umpires always say Play ball." They don't say Work ball." No other team sport is so fasci-nated with the aging process, perhaps because none is based on skill and timing rather than brute force. No other team sport has so many 15- and even 20-year careers.

Great sporting events unify local communities. For a nation they are exceptions to what sometimes seems to be a rule - that shared experiences are either sad, such as the assassination of President Kennedy, or divisive, such as the firing of General MacArthur. The World Series occurs four times as frequently as the lowa caucuses. What a wonderful country America is.

With her discovery that genetic information was not stationary, that it can transpose from one chromosome to another. Thomas Broker, a senior scientist at Cold Spring Harbor, said yesterday that Dr. McClintock ranks up with Darwin in understanding evolution."

Barbara McClintock was born on June 16, 1902, in Hartford and grew up mostly in Brooklyn and small-town Massachusetts. When she enrolled at Cornell University in 1919, she wanted to study plant breeding, but the department would not accept a woman as major, so she majored in botany. She turned to plant genetics as a graduate student at Cornell, where she earned her doctorate in 1927.

For several years she taught and did research at Cornell and other campuses, but was considered too much of a maverick for university life. Out of a job in 1942, she got some timely encouragement from Marcus Rhoades, a colleague from Cornell who was then at Columbia University. He helped her land a research position at the Carnegie Institution's department of genetics, which was at Cold Spring Har-bor. It marked the beginning of a long association with Carnegie and the laboratory, which is now an autonomous private institution en-gaged in basic biological research.

Her early work on anomalies in corn genetics was quickly recog-nized by her election in 1944 to the National Academy of Sciences, only the thrid woman to be so honored at that time. In her acceptance message, she said: "I am not a feminist, but I am always gratified when illogical barriers are broken - for Jews, women, Negroes, etc.

New Animal Category Is Established

WASHINGTON (AP) — Scientists have discovered a new classifica-tion of animal life that brings to 35 the number of phyla into which all animal life on Earth is categorized, says the Smithsonian Institution. A phylum is one of seven units used in the scientific classification of life. The latest discovery contains tiny undersea animals measuring less than one-hundredth of an inch in length and is only the third new group discovered and detailed in this century, according to the announcement.

Dr. Reinhardt M. Kristensen of the University of Copenhagen in Denmark discovered the animal group in sediment samples from around

Alcohol-Gallstone Link Is Seen The splicing of RNA is often critical to the process by which the instructions of a gene are translated into the production of a product the cell requires. That genes are activated and used.

LONDON (AP) — Drinking the equivalent of a half-bottle of wine each day might help prevent gallstones, but heavy drinking could have the opposite effect, British researchers say. Writing in The Lancet, the British medical journal, doctors at Bristol

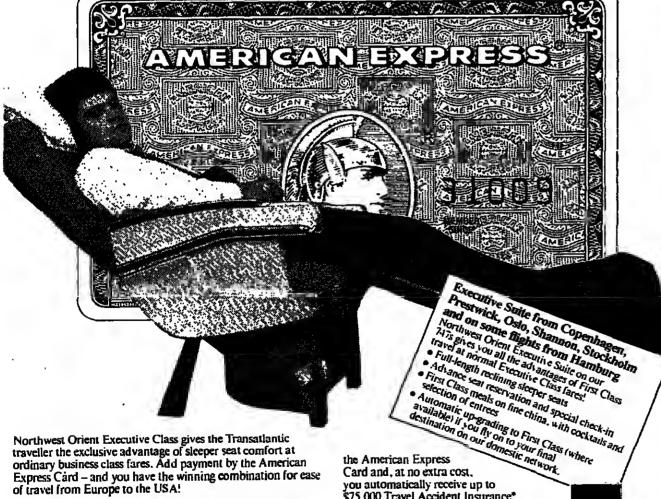

Royal Infirmary said moderate drinking lowers bile cholesterol saturation, the main cause of gallstones.

"The finding that alcohol lowers bile saturation suggests that regular, moderate drinkers have less of a risk of gallstone formation," the research team reported. But, they said, alcohol in large amounts might actually increase the risk of both gallstones and heart disease.

"No one much believed her or the artificial splicing of DNA (deoxyribonncleic acid), action by making a copy of the DNA in the form of cared," said Stephen Blose of Cold the mainstay of recombinant DNA research, known RNA. ## Little-Known CIA Office Writes Secret Histories

By Ian Black

Washington Past Service WASHINGTON -- Somewhere inside the sprawling headquarters of the Central Intelligence Agency in Langley, Virginia, a small group of professional scholars is producing volume after volume of secret history books that will never be found on the shelves of America's public libraries.

The CIA's historical office, which is little known even inside the agency, is a unique organization with unique problems.

There are a lot of people out there who simply don't want things written down," said one person familiar with the office's work. Under Director William J. Casey, who is an amateur historian. the office has been reborn, three years after it was killed off by internal arguments and lack of funds. "At the moment, the office is undergoing a mild revival," said a government historian in another agency. "How far it will get I couldn't predict. It just depends on who is and who isn't interested in

The scholar who occupies the CIA's chair of secret history apparently had his doubts as well. Before taking up the post in August 1981, according to a former coileague, Kenneth McDonald kept open his tenure on the faculty of George Washington University.

having histories written."

The CIA is proud of him, to judge by the relatively large amount of information the agency divulges about a career that inchodes four years in the Marines, degrees from Yale and Oxford and a professorship of strategy at the Naval War College.

But the agency will reveal no details of the work done by Mr. McDonald and three assistants.

Former CIA officials and scholars said the office concentrates more on the structure and organization of the agency than on the history of individual operations. Accounts of past operations, sources said, may be found in the records of other CIA offices.

The only publicly available information about the history program is in a footnote in a volume summarizing almost three decades of the CIA's existence, which was prepared for a 1975 study on U.S. intelligence activities by a Senate commission beaded by Frank Church, an Idaho Democrat.

Anne Karalekas, the commission staff member who wrote the sources "apincluded among her sources "approximately 75 volumes from the gence, and specialized areas of intelligence analysis."

The historical staff was established under the directorship of General Walter Bedell Smith in 1951, shortly after the CIA evolved from the World War II Office of Strategic Services. "It has had a checkered history, said one scholar, "flourishing and receding depending on the circum-In the mid-1970s, according to sources in the Reagan administration, the CIA office worked well, coordinating its activities with the historical offices of other agencies, especially the State and Defense departments, and belping them de classify CIA-originated material

Under Jack Feiffer, Mr. McDonald's predecessor, "there was a brief flowering of the exchange of information," a State Department historian said. And that, according to another source, "contributed to Feiffer's rapid demise." Around 1978, when an executive order by President Jimmy Carter complicated the already tangled rules on declassification of govern-ment documents, and the CIA bud-get was slashed, the agency's his-torical office began to wither. Mr. Feiffer was removed and the office was closed in January 1980.

"A lot of people were homified that a program that had already been pared down to about one and a half people should be closed down entirely," said another for-mer CIA official. He said the decision by Stansfield Turner, then the CIA director, was "absolutely bar-

The closing angered other government historians, who lobbied for the office's revival. It reopened, the CIA said, in October 1980.

Mr. McDonald, according to a colleague in another government historical office, "is getting a fine reputation around town as someone who is intelligent and knowledgeable."

Thierry Mugler, for one, said he will ease off his form-fitting designs, which he used to sculpt a bewirching hourglass figure, a affair, shape that is now best carried out preceding winter's trends.

The reasons for this transitional approach are many. Summer is a short season and a time of year when one wears fewer clothes, next to nothing in some cases. ## Alexandre Promises to Orchestrate Many Surprises When Arranging Hairstyle Themes of 11 Designers

. For eight hectic days, Alexandre and his team of 20 people will wield brushes and combs through the locks of 400 models whose coilfures must accentuate the vastly different fashion messages of Jean Patou, Kimijima, Thierry Mugler, Chloe, Ungaro, Lanvin, Givenchy, Chanel, Dior, Valentino and Saint

For Paton, who showed Tues-day, he created, "a very Parisian luxury, but one that is easily wearable." For Kimijima Wednesday, he presented "an ambiance - half French, half Asiatic." For Mugler on Thursday the look is, "audacionsness, mischievousness — he adores the theatrical, and I love to provide it," Alexandre said.

backstage at the shows. Inspiration comes from "a fabric, a hat, the atmosphere of the fashion house itself." Or it springs from the perceptions of years of rapport be-tween hairdresser and designer.

"Our job is to understand and analyze the silhouette the designer wishes to define," Alexandre said, "then strike the right note for each one in the limited time we have available. If I misrepresent the design of the conturier who has deded on me, then it's a catastrophe for him and for me." The collections have become more like show business spectacles, and he extends the analogy. "Like the opera star, the song is written, but one must perform it. The inter-pretation according to the gifts of the performer, that's the art.

Customized Accessories: The Quality Collectibles

By Barbara Maclantin PARIS - The impeccably dressed man who recently asked Jean-Pierre Renard to make him a crocodile briefcase and six matching suitcases — total price, $22,000 — is the sort of person who would always consider buying custom-made accessories.

But so is the elegant woman who orders a pair of custom-made shoes for $330 at Castelli's because her feet will like them and besides they will last longer than four pairs of fashionable ready-to-wear shoek Both know exactly what they want: the ultimate in luxury, perfect comfort, something made especially fo them and accessories that will ef dure for years and years. Th think their name, their taste, ix ji as important as anyone else's and they are probably right. Para of-fers more than the elegant creations of famous couture designers. It also has master craftsmen who do not think any farther shead than their next client, a perfectionist insisting on exquisitely made accessories.

Berluti does not just make shoot for kings and princes. It seems there are a lot of other men willing to pay at least $800 and then wait two months for a pair of perfectly fitting classic-looking shoes. For those who are slightly in would not want to leave the impre sion that they had just discover the elite world of custom-made this conscientions shoemaker wil specially polish the newly crafter shoes to make them look respect ably old. And when they are worn down a bit, in 10 years, he will resole them and make them look like new, for just $110.

Lobb, the English boot makers have been in Paris since 1900 and in 1973 moved into Hermes, where the clientele has gotten younger but is just as patient — the wait is six to eight months for a pair of beautifully made shoes. The price is $900.

Castelli's owner, Salvatori di Geronomo, said many of his wornen clients are tired of having sore feet; the others want something no one else has. "Industrialization has been hard on feet. We make shoes just like in the old days. You cannot work extra soft leather with h machine," Mr. di Geronomo said. The first pair of Castelli handmade shoes costs $300, once the form is made - there are 1,500 in the back room - other pairs cost $220.

One woman wanted a handbag exactly like the 20-year-old rose or trich bag she had in her hand and another wanted her favorite bag reproduced in four different colors. They get precisely they want within five days from Chicken-Itza. Prices ange from $300 to $1,000. "People get attached to beautifully made eccessories; when you've had a bag everything goes up quality does not seem that much more," Jacqueline Lollierou, who is considered one of the best artisans in Paris, said.

Most people who have their gloves made by Delrey are not planning on picking nettles like the Greek poet Homer who was the first to sing their praise. Forty people was a supply of the praise of the ple work with meticulous care to fill a 150 drawers with gloves of every size, color and design and suddenly it is not enough because gloves are "m" again. Which is why, even paying $180 dollars for a pair a client will still have to wait for one month for them to be made. "I am seeing as many Americans now as I did before the war; once we have their hand on record they can go home and order by mail." Pierre Pincon, owner of Delrey, said. "The big trend now is long gloves that are draped all the way up near the shoulder. Not everyone who wants them can afford them at about $200. But they can have a pair of short peccary gloves for $70."

Rita Hayworth and Gloria ous women who flattered their faces with hats from Panlette de la Madame Paulette, where a simple veil costs $35 and a not so simple one $625. Madame Panlette designs hats for Chanel and Clande Montana. From the time she looks shape, the swatch of fabric from the dress she will be wearing with the hat and has her idea sewn together 10 days will have gone by.

Let it rain — and do not worry it will — and Madame Madekine Gely will make a copy of that fabble loss umbrella left at home or one "under the weather." Jane Birkin can testify to that. She broke the handle of her 1930s umbrella recently, a cluster of chemies carved out of wood, and made Madam Gely promise to make her another one before she would continue working on her latest film.

The couture perfection found at Sabbia Rosa may be a private luxury, but that should not detract from the pleasure of designing one's own lingeric, including the color, form, how much lace and where. "We show customers existing designs, color sheet, an assortment of lace and then they can create their own classic locate to By Monique de Faucon PARIS - The attraction of The Twickenham - called la taverne by Left Bank locals - is not just the pub's 92-franc set-price bunch, but ats location, which results in a fively mix of intellectnals from Grasset Publishing around the corner, a growing number of ready-to-wear entrepreneurs and the trendy clients who have followed.

Of the 23 "names" in fashion boutiques, no fewer than 12 have moved into a 500-yard (450-meter) stretch of the Rue de Grenelle be-Iween the Cercle de la Croix Rouge and the Boulevard Raspail.

The first two arrivals had the strip to themselves for years: Sonia Rykiel in 1968 and Revillon in 1971. Both had discerned a slightly tacky trend developing in the fashion-mad Rue de Sevres a few yards away, and preferred to turn the corner, As Sevres went down-market and the rentals soared, others followed. They bought out cafés, printers, antique dealers and even absorbed the local Tresor Publique tax collection center, creating the best new mix of competitive resources that allows a woman to dress from head to foot.

The shopping trip commences at the Cercle de la Croix Rouge with the furs of Revillon and ends with the boutique of Michel Leger. Here is what the Rue de Grenelle offers in a short, zigzag stroll: • No. 2. This branch of Revildon's main store specializes in marmot, in "tweed printed" monton, Jambs' fur sweaters and fur-lined coats. Prices begin around 4,600 francs for ones with mock beaver lining. When faced with Revillon prices two factors should be kept in mind: This is one of the few furriers that buy directly at the international fur auctions so quality is out-standing; secondly, design criteria are studiously established to ensure that no style is outdated for four

• No. 3. Facing the furrier is, René Caty's shoe shop, where evcrything is French-made. Slim pumps are selling at 580 francs, high-heeled lace-up boots at 700 francs and the latest sueded calf, two-tone pumps in regulation black and Havana, black and grey or black and beige at 690 francs. Sonia Rykiel is a faithful elient.

• No. 6. This is the address from which Rykiel established herself as the unchallenged queen of French jersey fashion and creative knits. She shares No. 6 with Scapa Hommes, a kind of Gallic Ivy League men's shop. It is popular with the conservative students of the political science college around the corner, the sons of Raymond Barre, former prime minister, Dior's Marc Bohan, the rising movie actor Francis Huster and the current intellectual superstar of France, Bernard-Henri Levy. Princess Caroline of Monaco and the French singer Sylvie Vartan also shop here for the current men in their lives.

• No. 8. It is shoes again, but this time Italian. Guido Pasquali has a hit with his front-shit, low-heeled mocassins for 1,075 francs and his soft pumps on seven-centimeter (nearly three-inch) heels.

• No. 10. Emmanuelle Khanh, one of the most recent arrivals, is mostly stocked with Rumanian em-broidered shirts, fall herringbone or tweed two-pieces and chenille sweaters. The best of these are erence pages tipped from French striking multihued reproductions fashion magazines and leave after of canvases by famous artists such as Paul Klee at 2,090 francs.

• No. 5. Across the road is ETNO, with an ethnic touch that is presently Japanese. ETNO has heavy winter cottons and skirts rolled around the waist and cinched with obi-size belts, and an African mood is promised for

• No. 7. At Maud Frizon, the actresses Anonk Aimée, Catherine Deneuve and Claudia Cardinale drop in for soft, supple and waffled belts and bags. They turn the corner to 83 Rue des Saints Pères to match them to Frizon's shoes. This is the crossroad dominated by The Twickenham pub.

• No. 14. Charles Kammer offers the young kind of "Sacha" footwear with a three-strap sandal on six-centimeter heels for 695 francs. It is the current best-seller in black, grey and a choice of .This street was once an antique dealers' reserve. And one of those not yet bought out has ingeniously joined the fashion binge. Also at No. 22, Birgitta Haga has added to her elegant show of objects some of those superb 19th-century shawls that have become a staple of French dinner parties and theatergoing. Authoritic paisley designs they range from 2,200 francs through some outsize beauties of the Napoleon III period, which, at 4,800 francs, are big enough to replace a topcoat.

No. 24. The address is shared by Eva Blaise and Chris R, who manage not to tread on each other's turf. Eva is the hot address for original sweaters and silk jersey dresses, in black with boat neckline at around 880 francs. Chris has brought together collections by Su-ziko, Michel Harcourt and Andre Hayat, all very different members of the same school of laid-back fashion

Parking is difficult in the district, and impossible after No. 30, where chauffeur-driven limos, and diplomatic licenseplates hitch up onto the high sidewalks.

• No. 31 and No. 37. Claude

Montana for women and for men respectively is the draw for the limo crowd. Many buyers are embassy couriers making orders for the Middle East, Switzerland or the United States. They arrive with refplacing literally shipping orders of-ten of six or more ensembles at a colored skirt or pants. The tunic is time. Montana's clothes rate as the most upmarket leather gear in the world. Even the 5,000-franc men's suits in pin-striped banker's gray have collars and shoulder patches in leather.

No. 35. Between the two Monanas is the offbeat design work of Claude Revillion, all made by craftsmen. Unlined capes in alpaca (2,300 francs) or mohair (1,600 francs) are made by hand. Only a dressmaker could add the encrustations of silk down one side of a 790franc cardigan

• No. 33. A Spanish oeighbor, Robert Verrino, moved in two months ago to add a fresh level of sophisticated sportswear to the "Mode Grenelle." Typical and useful are his black-edged wool wrapover kimono dresses with deep set-in sleeves at 2,500 francs. No. 39. Michel Klein, who together with Montana and Rykiel, can probably claim the heaviest traffic on the street, is very much the darling of Jardin des Modes and Cosmopolitan magazine readbeyond the Rue des Saints Pères ers. He also appeals to the young, was Chacok, the south of France successful, dynamic and moneyed successful, dynamic and moneyed French career women and to actresses like Isabelle Adjani. spail are two group boutiques.

No. 38. is Sarah Mill, a pret-oporter veteran and an expert in African art. She believes in a market for clothes the French call "ultraportable," translatable as functional and restrained. Her bunch is certainly working out with current fast-selling seven-eighths coats, lined in wool and made of a mock leather called "cuirissimo" that is rain and snow resistant. Prices are from 1,000 to 1,700 francs. Various designers contribute to a useful permanent selection of party clothes in silk or taffeta, with items just beginning to stack up. By comparison with her neighbor, she is probably cheaper and less far out than Grenelle at No. 42.

Black, Blue Can Simplify Building of Wardrobes

PARIS - "A woman is always safe in blue..."
That kind of musty fashion dictate has always been suspect. But when a woman who has lived, explained and designed fashion for the past three decades insists that the basic wardrobe for a woman in the '80s can be limited to knit jersey and flannel in just black or blue, it is worth taking a second

This dressing edict comes from Peggy Roche, former mannequin, editor of Elle and, as of two and ahalf months ago, designer. She has already attracted international attention in her bontione at 7 Rue du Pre aux Cleres. Private customers are collecting her clothes and store buyers from a dozen countries have placed orders. U.S. stores attracted by her philosophy include Berg-dorf-Goodman, I. Magnin and Hattie.

Many remember Peggy Roche as a star model at Jacques Heim, Guy Laroche and Hubert de Givenchy. In those days, a mannequin had to stand for hours while conturiers and their aides draped, cut and tacked fabric - sometimes even sewing buttons onto their bodies to create a dress from start to finish. A few thousand hours of that adds up to firsthand experience of fashion in general and how to go about designing it in particular.

From there she moved to Elle in the early '60s. The magazine, then at its most prestigious period, literally re-defined the French fashion magazine giving readers access to style that had previously been reserved for an international minority. During her several years as a shion journalist, Elle became the blueprint for many other fashion magazines. And after she worked behind the scenes in a range of ready-to-wear groups, she decided Within a week of the September opening, this strictly two-tone winter collection had been bought by private clients including novelist Françoise Sagan, Iñes de la Fressange, the model of the moment, Françoise Fabian, the actress, and Nadine Trintignant, the film direc-ft could be the current turn-away from overconstructed clothes, padding, jutting shoulders and sharp geometry that has tempted a whole contrast binding on hefty knit mid-group of experienced fringe designers to move back into the fashion husiness. The Peggy Roche version is intrinsically classic yet up to date: Indémodable is the French tag for clothes that will not fly out of fashion tomorrow afternoon.

Peggy Roche's mock asymmetric black wool pull.

"Everything is designed to go right through from morning to evening," she said.

She goes just one better than Henry Ford and the first cars he offered in a choice of black or black, and makes it black and navy blue: One shade always trims the other, whichever way you take it.

Flap-fronted sailor pants fastened by gilt buttons are the dominent shape - "because they swing across the years from 16 to 60. Straight but full, they are worn with blazers in superb Racine jer-sey and sell for 1,500 francs. They are fastened low by a single button shaped like a sunburst jewel. Flapfront skirts are 1,350 francs and are matched most often with cardigans piped in satin at 1,650 francs.

The same two-tone policy puts striped sleeve cuffs rolled back just to the elbow,

The newest cardigan shape in Paris is one of the trim little Roche ponchos worn over long hooded sweaters. Two-tone also rules at home in jersey housecoats, black or navy piped in gold and closed by a gold tassel belt. At 2,890 francs, it is clearly a unisex shape.

Such chic demands splashes of light and color which she provides with rhinestone jewels, short necklaces of crystal cabochons threaded onto passementerie, and skip-rope pearl necklaces worn with the '30s touch of a big casual knot at the side of the throat.

Buyers in town for the pret-aorter are checking out her summer '84 look, which will be by her standards wildly colorful. Everything, but everything is in beige, khaki and white, with accessories of shocking pink.

How the Women Behind the Covers Shape France's Fashion Magazines

PARIS — The same dress never looks the same in Elle, Marie Claire, Jardin des Modes, Vogne or Marie France, because it is seen by five very different women, editors in chief, presenting fashion to women that they imagine to be a bit like themselves. Their strong personalities, reflected in the magazine's they direct, have thousands of French women buying at least three fashion magazines every month and choosing the same dress once they have seen how peppy, sober, avant-garde, extravagant or discreet they will look in it. Elle's editor, Nicole Crassat, was recently given a status watch from Hermes; the band is now an army surplus strap. "Typically Elle," she confirmed. She likes "kidding around" with fashion, trying the unexpected, offering little do-it-yourself surprises that have set the tone for the magazine. She thinks of women who are independent, feminine and a little coquettish, young at any age, who are healthy, like sports and get some exercise as a general reader profile. PARIS - Fashion in Paris is something else again, a case of beyond-the-beyond, a ritual, a cultural phenomenon that occurs at regular intervals. Despite the fact that fashiou is fragmented all over the world nowadays, Paris still has magic authority, the ultimate say.

For Paris is the only capital in the world with a considerable fashion tradition, backed, as it is by a century of hante couture, which blossomed at the Belle Epoque with Worth, Poiret, Doucet et al. At that time, there were 2,000 fashion houses in Paris, of which 600 were

The French were then supreme in the art of fit, which meant that each and every woman was dressed, from head to toe and from the inside out, with a custom-made precision totally unknown anywhere else. This idea of fit did not apply to just the dress, but to every single item of clothing, from corsets to petricoats and from hats to gloves. Paris designers did not do it all by themselves; neither did they work in a vacuum. They were in close and constant touch with more than 100 small, gifted artisans who kept producing the various accessories.

paruriers, or ornament makers, they were grouped in a federation, and twice a year they each produced a collection that was submitted to the eaders of Paris fashion. These parariers made hats and bags, buttons and belts, veils and ribbons, feathers and flowers and miles of shimmering embroidery. Today, there are only 10 such houses left in Paris, one for each of those specialties. François Lesage, president of the federation of parariers, whose embroidery house supplies most couture and top ready-to-wear designers, said that for the last couple of years he has been working closely with U.S. designers. Before leaving for New York to meet with Bill Blass, Oscar de la Renta, Geoffrey Beene and Calvin Klein, he said: "We are 10 times more expensive than Hong Kong, but the Americans don't seem to mind.

What we do, nobody else can do.".

As an example, Lesage, whose house is 120 years old and employs 100 people, said that his business still works as it did in the 18th century. To make a collection of 200 samples, which we do twice a year, requires 10,000 hours of work." He added that Calvin Klein's sweaters last season, with embroidered collar and cuffs by Lesage soid for $5,000. The red-and-black embroidered suit, which looked like a piece of Boulle furniture and which Karl Lagerfeld designed for

Chanel, required 1,000 works of embroidery — and cost 400,000 francs, about $50,000, Lagerfeld said. (Yes, there was somebody to

"In New York, designers do work in a vacuum. They deal with importers who do their buying a year in advance. Designers do not eujoy the same kind of instant artistic support. And, as you know, in creation, the best ideas often come at the last minute." As a result, and to play it safe, Lesage said Calvin Klein ordered 600,000 francs worth of embroidery last season, of which he used only one-third.

To this day, the French also make the most beautiful dresses in the world. It may be because while tailors seem to abound everywhere.

francs to 4,000 francs the linear meter, depending on the thread used, the complexity of the design and the height of the lace, making it "about 10 times more expensive than machine made lace."

But then right from the start lace has been a luxury item and sometimes an expensive obsession. The nobility used to sell their chateanx and go bankrupt buying lace," Fouriscot said. "Lace was mentioned in wills and handed down like jewelry."

Lace was de rigueur for royal weddings and when Marie-Louise married Napoléon her trousseau contained 100,000 francs worth of up with fashion, so the new opulence for evening should spell good times for the industry.

"When lace is in fashion, it sells everywhere, even in the middle of an economic slump," Ginestou-said, recalling the halvoon days of the Second Empire when every fashion plate wore dresses drippingwith lace, lace shawis and even carried lace parasols. "If fashion keeps moving towards refinement we may conquer those markets now a closed like Brazil, Argentina and the Eastern countries."

A.H. Robins Stock Near 10-Year High Despite Its Dalkon Shield Problems

EW YORK —Last week, 243 issues posted new highs for the last 52 weeks or longer on the New York Stock Exchange. Electric ntilities were well represented, thanks to renewed buying of moderate-growth, interest-sensitive shares. International Business Machines, the pacesetter of the bull market, rose to records.

Also appearing on the records list were Bristol-Myers, recommended lately by several brokerage firms, and United Telecommunications, a stock that fits neatly into the telecommunications group, which is growing in popularity. There were stocks, too, that made the list without any specific new developments but that spelled out little stories of their

Despite its size and array of products, its stock receives no coverage by some major brokerage houses. And, in the past, even firms that fullowed the stock were often lacking in exuberant preise. In late 1979, when Robins's shates were selling at $8.25, E.F. Hutton & Co. stated: "We retain our belief that at current levels the stock is fundamentally overvalued. Neutrality on these

That announcement produced a temporary effects to the medicine. That announcement produced a temporary reaction in Merck's stock, which numbled $4.625, to $91.75, Sept. 1. Wednesday, Merck closed at $100, down 25 cents, on the Big Board.

> On this count, too, Robins deserves notice, for it has endured a long-running problem with a product — its Dalkon Shield intranterine device -that is no longer on the market. The Dalkon Shield became the object of extensive litigation and expense for Robins and even today, as Standard & Poor's points out, "uncertainties remain as to the extent of charges" related to this litigation. What is certain, however, is that Robins's auditors issued a qualified opinion on the company's 1982 financial statements, subject to the outcome of this matter.

> In last year's annual report, the company itself stated: "If 1982 had a dark side, it was the Dalkon Shield litigation. The number of uninsured cases continues to increase, and as these cases mature, any awards and expenses associated with their disposition will have to be paid by the company. We therefore expect this litigation to adversely impact earnings in each of the next several years."

Confidence Expressed

Management added that "the shadow of the Dalkon Shield notwithstanding, we remain confident about the future of the company."

As of the end of 1982, according to S&P, Robins and its insurer had paid $130 million in disposing of 5,100 claims charging injuries from use of the Dalkon Shield. "About 3,300 cases and claims were still pending, many of which were not covered by insurance," the advisory service added. Meanwhile, company profits rose last year to $1.98 a share from

Two weeks ago, Rotan Mosle Inc., a Houston-based firm, recommended purchase of Robins's stock and forecast "above-average earnings growth of 16 percent annually over the next five years." It estimates profits at $2.45 a share for 1983 and at $2.75 next year. These projections are in line with those at Merrill Lynch.

Finally, for armchair stock-market chartists, Robins holds interest. Its shares plunged from a high of $40.75 in 1973 to $8.125 the following year. Thereupon, the stock formed a long base within a narrow trading range until 1982. Such a "half-sancer pattern" is regarded by many technical analysts as forming a potentially favorable chart -- provided that good news is forthcoming from a company to send the stock higher.

Sweden's Datatronic Readies Bid To Launch U.S. Software Invasion

STOCKHOLM - Datatronic, a distributor of Commodore computers in Sweden that has turned software company, plans to enter the U.S. market with its own word-processing and data-base pro-grams in the next few weeks and will sell 20 percent of its shares to U.S. investors sometime after Jan.

The company will point to its rapid sales and carnings growth and its experience developing software for the market in Sweden, which has one of the world's most "computer-dense" societies. Mats Gabrielsson, Datatronie's 33-year-old president, is convinced that the company's future lies in the U.S. market. Once Datatronic is established there, it plans to develop and market programs, including those for sophisticated games, timed at the low-priced end of the market, exclusively for users of Commodore home and personal

I hope to be a substantial factor in the software business in the U.S.," said Mr. Gabrielsson, a graduate of Stockholm's prestigious Handelshogskolan business school who is not a computer engineer. Datatronic is setting up a software-development company and a marketing unit in the United States and will move some of its key project managers there, ft will offer a low-priced package of programs, including its Calc Result spreadsheet, the new World Result text editor and its Base Result Detatronic's figures are impressive. Mr. Ga-brielsson recently raised his 1983 presax profit forecast to 40.3 million kronor (about $5.2 million) from 27 million kronor. First-half pretax earnings nearly tripled, to 14.9 million kronor, and sales rose 228 percent, to nearly 152 million kronor.

With the selection of an investment bank to float Datatronic's American Depositary Receipts in its final stages and with the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission looking on Datatronic's president is understandably reluctant to make any earnings predictions for 1984. But he notes that the ADR issue is timed so that complete results for 1983 will be in before Datatronic ADRs are offered to U.S. investors.

An analyst at another well-known London trader in Scandinavian shares also said: "We haven't examined this company," but said that Datatronic could be "a sleeping beauty."

NEWPORT, Rhode Island -The doorman at the Sheraton Hotel wanted to know the meaning of "Ausgezeichnet!" - the German word emblazoned on the back wintlows of 54 new Volkswagens brought here for a 1984-model pre-

"I think it means 'excellent," one hotel guest responded. "No, it's closer to 'outstanding." said another. "Oh," the doorman said, and walked away, unimpressed.

If the doorman's response in the slogan and its symbolism is a fair sampling of the public's attitude, it could doom Volkswagen's efforts to resain prominence in the United States, where it once was the king

VW, the West German automaker that brought America the low-cost, durable Beetle, is in trouble. The company's share of the U.S. auto market — including domestically produced and imported VWs.
—is 1.8 percent. That's down from 6.7 percent in 1970, when VW filled U.S. showrooms with imports only. Also, many of VW's onceloyal dealers are using Japanese cars to boost sales volume.

VW's 1984 products are solid performers, but they mostly are repeats of what began rolling off the company's assembly lines several years ago. Even VW officials concede that, in the United States, 1984 will be a "bridge year," a period to get through with the products they have until the 1985 model year, when VW will introduce a newer version of its Rabbit, already selling in West Germany as

VW always has been refuctant to change body styles or tinker with gadgetry, a policy that served the company well in the days when the Beetle, with its distinctive shape and charming quirks, had no com-petition. But VW's continued re-fusal to play with sheet metal seems to be hurting the company today, largely because there are so many other cars that look like VWs and that can compete with VWs in performance and price, industry ana-

> So, instead of showing off new body styles or talking about signifiemphasizing its ethnic heritage and sor to the Beetle, "was the hottest-corporate identity in a bid to in-

The idea is to capitalize on what VW officials say is a strong U.S. belief that German engineering means superior quality. "It's not a car," say the new VW ads, "It's a Volkswagen."

But it's a last-chance strategy, say some auto-industry analysis, and it may be too late.

"Volkswagen easily could have traded on that theme 10 years ago. But it's a fading image now. The quality image of Teutonic engi-neeing essentially has been taken over by the Japanese," said J. David Power, president of J.D. Power & Associates, an auto-market rescarch firm based in Westlake Village, California.

Not so, said Noel Phillips, president of Volkswagen of America, VW's U.S. manufacturing and sales diary. VW's emphasis on its German heritage "on balance is the strongest marketing platform that we can use in this marketplace," Mr. Phillips said.

But VW's target customers young, well-educated, upwardly mobile Americans — have been taking their dollars elsewhere. The more affluent among them are buying Volvo, the best-selling European nameplate in the United States. Others have demonstrated a penchant for BMW and Mercedes-

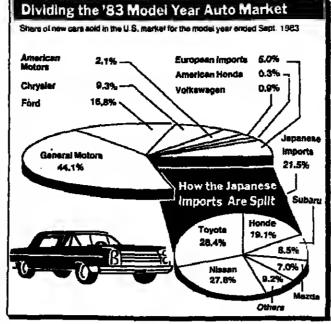

And the vast majority of VW's target group, as indicated by the 22-percent share of the domestic arket enjoyed by Japanese automakers, are buying Hondas, Maz-das, Datsuns and Toyotas.

"VW has been sort of caught in a position where they're neither an economy-car company that can compete easily with something like the Beetle or the Rabbit, nor are they a luxury-car company that can compete effectively against products like Volvo. At the moment, Volkswagen is neither here nor there," Mr. Power said. VW officials, including Mr. Phillips, grudgingly agree with some aspects of Mr. Power's analysis. Most of the criticism of VW's performance in the United States stems from the company's handling of the Rabbit, particularly the high-ly-fuel-efficient Rabbit diesel, Mr. Phillips said cantly different engines and sus-pension systems, VW this year is United States in 1975 as the succes-selling car around for a while," said David Healy, auto analyst with New York-based Drexel Burnham Lambert Inc. But he said VW stuck with the Rabbit too long, made too few visible changes, and insisted on charging a "premium price" for the car even though it was challenged by Japanese models. The mistake VW made was to allow itself, in effect, to become regarded as "The Rabbit Compa-" Mr. Phillips said.

"It's the old story about having all of your eggs in one basket," he said. "It's a very dangerous situa-tion to be in. And we, as a corpora-tion, have suffered for one simple reason above all else in the last couple of years, and that is that we had a total emphasis, not only on the Rabbit, but on the Rabbit die-

The diesel became an absolute obsession of everyone in the days when the gas crisis had everyone involved in economy motoring," said Mr. Phillips. "Oh, we put a big, big emphasis on the diesels. In fact, more than 50 percent of the Rab-bits that were being sold were with

"But, suddenly, one day, the market changed, and people weren't so much interested in economy motoring or diesels anymore. They weren't interested in anyone's diesels, it seemed. The diesel sales went down, and our corporate performance went down with it."

Now, VW is stressing its corporate identity, "the tradition of value, quality and consistency that Volkswagen stands for," Mr. Phillips said. And along with that, VW will stress "the fact that the company has a much better balance, a fine range of products," he said. "We particularly want to get across, as ally got those people.

The plant recently has been working one shift because of the dramatic decline of diesel Rabbit sales, down 63 percent so far this year from 1982 levels. Sales of gasoline-powered Rabbits, led by the GTI, have mereased 29.3 percent

VW's other major car lines in clude the mid-size Jetta and the huxury Quantum. Those cars sold poorly in 1983, largely because of price. For example, a 1.6-liter, die-sel-powered, two-door Jetta sold for about $8,490 this year. VW is knocking $1,100 off that price to spur sales of comparably equipped

VW officials say their company cannot return to the days of the under-$5,000 car, strongly indicat-ing that, at least in the United States, the company will abandon its fight for the low-end market.

"We don't build a $4,800 ca ymore because we just can't do it. It would be an ersatz kind of a car. We could not make it a real Volkswagen at that price," said James Fuller, a VW vice president

The low end will be left to the Japanese, to companies such as Isuzu and Suzuki, both of which have a tentative agreement with General Motors Corp. to ship in a total of 300,000 subcompact cars for the 1985 model year.

The Japanese also have poised themselves to grab those Americans shopping for cars with super fuel economy. Volkswagen, long the fuel-economy leader, tradition-

Robert T. Parry, chief economist of Security Pacific National Bank in Los Angeles, told the American Bankers Association that "chances of a prolonged period of growth and relatively moderate inflation are pretty high."

Economic growth, be predicted, will likely settle down into the 4-5 percent range next year, following the robust 9.7 percent rate in the second quarter and the nearly 7 percent rate in the latest quarter.

This relatively strong growth will enable unemployment rates to fall further, but they are not likely to fall below 8 percent," he said. The bank economist predicted that inflation would rise, but "will remain moderate," partly because of the large extent of excess factory and domestic competition among Interest rates, he said, "are not expected to change greatly." But, be said, "the trend could be downward through the next six in nine months.'

Jerry L. Jordan, a former member of the president's Council of onomic Advisors, said that there was good reason to be concerned about inflation and interest rates given the huge federal budget defi- est rates through the rest of this cit and the rapid growth in the U.S. money supply.

There are still good reasons for HONOLULU - U.S. bankers thinking that the rates of inflation

> But he cautioned that "deficits do matter" and that "the prospect of large deficits in the federal budget for many years into the future and uncertainty about the implications for interest rates are factors one cannot avoid when thinking about the outlook for the U.S. economy for the next few years."

Mr. Jordan, who is now a profes-sor at the University of New Mexico in Albuquerque, also said the Federal Reserve has adopted "very rapid monetary growth targets for all of 1983 and their rationalizations as to why it will not be inflationary are not convincing.

Should strong monetary and fisyear and most of next year, he warned that inflation could begin capacity and continuing foreign to rise rapidly by late next year and hic, probably in 1985."

The near-term future, he said, is brightened by a stronger-than-expected economic recovery and the expectation that inflationary pressures are likely to remain moderate He predicted little change in interyear and "a moderate decline" in

The best that Datatronic could hope for is a boost in U.S. homecomputer sales around Christmas to lift some of the general gloom about the sector on the U.S. stock markets, the analyst maintained.

Mr. Gabrielsson maintained that Datatronic is not like the other software houses with which it would be competing. The creative part with us is about 60 software people," he said. "There are few software houses who have so many guys in the microcomputer field."
Mr. Gabrielsson thinks that "user friendliness" is the key to selling software to a mass market consisting almost entirely of lay-men. When you are buying the software piece, all you have to know is one and one equals two. When you learn more, the software will upgrade itself," he said when asked how future Datatronic prodncts would be designed. Mr. Gabrielsson said it would mostly involve making systems that teach people to use them and are adaptable to a user's educational level. The education part will be 90 percent tomorrow, today it is around 10 percent," he predicted. He also believes that the company's exclusive focus on Commodore's PET, Vic-20 and Vic-64 computers won't change. "There is a lol of room for an independent software maker if you do it well on one machine," Mr. Gabrielsson

In Sweden, Mr. Gabrielsson's plans to shift the center of Datatronic's operation to the United States have stirred controversy because the company is portrayed as trying to escape from a planned system of "wage-earner" funds to be managed by union-dominated boards. The five regional wageearner funds proposed by Sweden's Social Democratic government would buy shares in Swedish businesses with the proceeds from a levy on busines profits and wages. Mr. Gabrielsson did not deny that wage-carner funds, which will Japaner Finally probably be started in early 1984, have speeded his plan to move into the U.S. market, but he stresses the Wark in Resident scheme wasn't decisive. "This is only tax planning," he said.

Minnesota Mining and Manufacturing Company Redemption Date: November 14, 1983 Exchange Right Expires: November 14, 1983

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN to the holders of the 43/% Subordinated Delectives due August 15, 1987 (the "Debentures") of Dart Industries Inc. (the "Company") exchangeable on and after September 1, 1973 for common stock of Minnesota Miolog and Manufacturing Company that, pursuant to the provisions of the indenture doted as of August 16, 1972 (the "Indenture") between the Company and Morgan Guaranty Trust Company of New York, Trustee, the Company has elected to redeem all the outstanding Debentures on November 14, 1983 (the "Redemption Date") at a redemption price of 100% of the principal amount thereof, together with occured interest from August 15, 1983 to the Redemption Date in the amount of $12.01 for each $1,000 principal amount. Payment of the redemption price and occured interest, which will oggregate $1,012.01 for each $1,000 principal amount of Debentures, will be made on or after the Redemption Date upon presentation oud surrender of the Debentures together with all coupons appertaining thereto maturing after the Redemption Date at the offices of any one of the Payiog and Exchange Agents set forth below.

The Debentures will on longer be outstanding after the date fixed for redemption. The redemption price will become due and payable upon each Debenture on the Redemption Date and interest thereon shall cease to accrue on and after the Redemption Date.

ALTERNATIVE TO REDEMPTION Holders of Debentures have the right on or before the close of business on November 14, 1983, to exchange the Debentures for common stack of Minnesota Mining and Monufacturing Company (the "Common Stock").

The Debentures may be exchanged for Common Stock at the rate of 10.10 shares for each $1.000 principal amount of Debentures. In order to effect this exchange, o Debenture holder should complete, sign and surrender to any one of the Phying and Exchange Agents either the NOTICE OF ELECTION TO EXCHANGE oo the Debenture or o similar notice together with the Debentures to be exchanged. A holder who surrenders Debentures for exchange will receive a certificate for the full number of whole shares to which he is entitled. No fractional shares of Common Stock will be issued upoo exchange of any Debentures, but in lieu thereof the Company will pay in United States dollars an amount equal to the market volue of such fractional shares computed on the basis of the closing price of the Common Stock on the New York Stock Exchange oo the last business day before the dote of exchange, If more than one Debenture shall be delivered for exchange at one time by the same holder, the oumber of full shares which shall be issuable or deliverable upon exchange shall be computed on the basis of the aggregate principal amount of Debentures so delivered. The exchange will be deemed to have been effected immediately prior to the close of husiness on the date on which the Paying and Exchange Agents receive such NOTICE OF ELECTION TO EXCHANGE or similar notice and the Debentures surrendered for exchange. Upon exchange of Debentures no poymeot or edjustment will be made for interest accrued thereon or on account of ony cash dividends on the Common Stock delivered upon such exchange. Debentures delivered for exchange must be accompanied by all interest coupons maturing on and after August 15, 1984.

The closing price of the Common Stock on October 6, 1983, os reported in the Composite Tape the holder. The Debentures may be exchanged for Common Stock at the rate of 10.10 shares for each $1.000 panied by all interest coupons maturing on and after August 15, 1984.

The closing price of the Common Stock on October 6, 1983, as reported in the Composite Tape for New York Stock Exchange-Listed Stocks, was $89.13 per share. At such price, the holder of $1,000 principal amount of Debentures would receive upon exchange shares of Common Stock and cash for the fractional interest having an oggregate value of $900.16. However, such value is subject to change depending on changes in the market volue of the Common Stock.

SO LONG AS THE MARKET PRICE OF THE COMMON STOCK DOES NOT EXCEED $100.19 PER SHARE, HOLDERS OF DEBENTURES UPON EXCHANGE WILL RECEIVE COMMON STOCK AND CASH IN LIEU OF ANY FRACTIONAL SHARE HAVING AN AGGREGATE MARKET VALUE OF LESS THAN THE CASH WHICH THEY WOULD RECEIVE UPON REDEMPTION.

Delivery of Debentures to any one of the Paying and Exchange Agents after the close of business on November 14, 1983, regardless of instructions in any notice, will result in payorent of the redemption price of 100% of the principal amount of the Debentures together with occurred interest to November 14, 1983.

Bache Manager Accused | Peugeot Gains In $5-Million N.Y. Theft

By Michael Blumstein New York Times Service

NEW YORK - A manager in the stock dividend department of Prudential-Bache Securities has been charged in connection with the theft of more than $5 million from the investment firm, the Federal Bureau of lovestigation said. The reported theft, in which three other men were also arrested Tuesday, involved the transfer of funds from Prudential-Bache to bank accounts controlled by those who were arrested, the FBI said.

The FBI said its two-week-old nvestigation would continue, with further arrests possible. The losses at Prudential-Bache, one of the largest U.S. brokerage firms and a subsidiary of Prudential Insurance Co., could total $15 million and date back 18 months, a source close to the investigation said.

Peter Costiglio, a spokesman for Prudential-Bache, said come of the stolen money came from customer accounts and that the losses were covered by an insurance policy with Aetna Life & Casualty Co.

The FBI said that since January John Elfer, a section manager in the stock dividend department, authorized the payment of 60 checks totaling about $5 million to five corporate accounts at Bank Leumi Trust Co. The stock dividend department distributes divideods paid on shares that the company is holding for either its customers or its own accounts.

None of the five corporations did busioess with Prudential-Bache, Joseph A. Valiquette, an FBI spokesman, said. The three others charged with Mr. Elfer withdrew money from the Bank Leumi accounts, with some of the money winding up in the Ramapo Bank in Wayne, New Jersey, Mr. Valiquette

Government sources, however r, said rejection of the layoff lan may be reconsidered if Talbot comes up with a "satifactory social program" aimed at retraining furloughed work-

Pensent's announcement in July that it planned to cut almost 10 percent of the work force at the two companies has been strongly criticized by trade unions. The Labor Ministry said the early retirements were necessary because of overemployment at the two companies, but it added that because the Talbot layoffs are of national importance the government intends to obtain from Peugeot clear commitments for the future of the Poissy plant.

Automobiles Peugeot, a division of Peugeot, lost 1,29 billion francs ($163.3 million) in 1982 after a 2.13-billion loss in 1981.

New Home Computer in 1983 $119.2 million, which it attributed

By N.R. Kleinfield

New York Times Service NEW YORK - Texas Instruments Inc. has announced that, contrary to expectations, it will not introduce a new home computer this year.

The annococement Tuesday gave rise to conjecture that the company may be significantly scaling back its home computer program or even preparing to bow out of the market. Deep price cuts and a flood of products have made the home computer business hazardous for many manufacturers.

Other analysts suggested that the company may be waiting for Inter-national Business Machines Corp. to introduce its eagerly awaited personal computer, called the Peaout, so that Texas Instruments can make its machine compatible with "A decision has been made that for the balance of this year, which carries through the peak Christmas season, there will not be an introduction of a new home computer console," said Norman Neureiter, a company spokesman, in response to an inquiry. "We've decided we will concentrate our efforts on the 99/4a this year."

Sales of Texas Instruments' current home computer, the 99/4a, have been far more sluggish than the company had anticipated. It reported a second-quarter loss of

to a sudden plunge in sales of home

TI Says It Will Not Introduce

computers and software. In June, after the company ancounced it would have a loss for the second quarter, its stock fell by more than $50 in two days, to $107. It has been selling for around $120

Texas Instruments had been widely expected to introduce a more powerful and more expensive ne, known as the 99/8 and code-named the "Armadillo," at the Consumer Electronics Show in June. Though it was shown to some select customers, it was not dis-played publicly and the company has never announced any plans for the computer.

[The company, however, said Wednesday that it is not introducing a new home computer this year because such a machine never existed in the first place, The Associated Press reported from Dallas.

Wholesale Prices Rise in Italy

Reuters

ROME - Italian wholesale prices rose 0.8 percent in August after a 0.7-percent rise in July, the National Statistics Institute said Wednesday. The institute said wholesale prices were 8.7 percent higher in August than they were 12

The company has never officially announced such a product or said when it may be available," Mr.

Neurester said.] "I think this is going to be interpreted by Wall Street that they're not going to participate in the home computer business," said Mi-chael Krasko, a securities analyst at L.F. Rothschild, Unterberg, Towbin. "If they don't come out with new product, that tells the marketplace that they're not going to play the game. I think that will be perceived positively by the Street." Vincent Glinski, an analyst at Drexel Burnham Lambert, said he thought that Texas Instruments may be redesigning the 99/8 so that it will be compatible with the Pea-out. As originally designed, the 99/8 was based on Texas Instruments microcomputers; the Peanut uses an Intel microcomputer.

Mr. Glinski said it was possible that Texas Instruments may drop out of the home computer business but still continue to compete in the educational market.

"Considering that it's Oct. 11, it would be a little late to introduce a product anyway," said Stuart John-son, an analyst at Wertheim & Co. It would tend to get in the way of other products. This shouldn't affect the company's finances. The question is whether the existing inventory of the 99/4a is going to be

THE CHINESE BLACK CHAMBER: An Adventure in Espionage

By Herbert O. Yardley. Introduction by James Bamford. 225 pp. Illustrated. $13.95. Houghton Mifflin, One Beacon St., Boston, Mass. 02108.

Reviewed by

Christopher Lehmann-Haupt

THERE'S a scene in this China diary that I some readers may find hard to believe. In fact there are a number of such scenes in this journal, but this one struck me as particularly hard to credit. It concerns an evening spent with a rich man's concubine known as Mama who had come to the author's quarters to find out when he would deliver on a promise to out when he would nearest to a person secure a set of riding habits for her and her daughter. After removing her gown and performing some "gymnastic exercises," Mama, "perhaps to make sure that she and Daughter got their riding habits," proceeded to remove the rest of her clothes, stretch out on the anthor's box couch, and motion him to lie beside ber.

But as he approached, Mama Hanched with fright at something she saw across the room. When the author turned to look, he made out. silhonetted in the window, the shaved head of his new chanffeur, Fen Tao. "Peeping is a common frailty," the author writes, "and I'm not above it myself, but Fen Tao's insolence had gone too far. As he blinked, endeavoring to see into the darkened room, I reached for my snub-nosed automatic, took careful aim at a hand grasping the window ledge, and fired. The hands slipped from the window ledge, and Fen Tao, like the Monk of Siberia, disappeared with a 'hell of a yell,' his body crashing through the bamboo shelter. Loud accesses and the hullabaloo of servants ensued." Now this may strike one as the most egre-gions of tall tales, especially when the after-math turns out to be that the author was chided by his superiors for merely shooting off the chauffeur's finger instead of killing him. But you have to take into account the time and setting of the incident — Chonaging, China, in 1939. It was a time when civil war between the Nationalists and the Communists, and to men-tion invasion by the Japanese, was tearing apart the already fraying fabric of traditional China Chongoing, then called Changking, was under daily threat of bombing by the Japanese. Food was scarce. Inflation was rampant Death was imminent. These conditions served to exacerbate a traditionally dog-est-dog way

And then you have to consider that the writer of the account is the late Herbert Osborn Yardley. As James Bamford, author of "The Puzzle Palace," puts it in his introduction to "The Chinese Black Chamber": "In the black and gray world of espionage and code-breaking, Herbert O. Yardley was a Calder mobile of bright bold colors. He was a free spirit in a land of cenobites."

Herbert Yardley was the United States's foremost cryptographer. As the organizer, in June 1917, of Section Eight of Military Intelligence (MI-8), he forged the first link in what James Bamford calls "the long genealogical chain that would eventually lead to the present National Security Agency." He was a genius at breaking codes who was forced out of govern-ment service when then-Secretary of State

Henry L. Stimson issued his famous 1929 directive. "Gentlemen do not read each other's mail." At that time he turned to writing and produced such successful books as "The American Black Chamber," "The Blonde Countess" and "Red Sun of Nippon."

Eventually hiring himself out as confidential cryptologic adviser to Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek, Yardley became a favorite character among old China hands. He even appears in 2 book as late as Theodore H. White's "In Search of History" (1978) as "a man of broad humor and unrestrained enthusiasms," among which "were drink, gambling and women." Yardley also happens to have written "The Education of a Poker Player," which, if it advocates a style too conservative for Friday-night penny ante, is easily the most entertaining poker book I know of.

So you tend to believe the stories that Yardley tells in "The Chinese Black Chamber," which was written 42 years ago and suppressed until now because of Washington's nervousness about giving away cryptographic secrets.
You believe his detailed accounts of breaking codes, especially the one that a character known as The One-Armed Bandit was using based on Pearl Buck's novel about China, "The Good Earth." You believe his story of esconting a Chinese woman home and learning later ing a ... mnese woman home and learning later in the evening that her father had strangled her to death for keeping company with a foreign devil. You believe his loathing for conditions in China, and his prediction that while "China is in the process of change," it will not become what "the Western world, with its ideals of democracy and equality, has been led to ex-

There are two photographs of Yardley in the book, one taken before and one taken after his China experience. In the first he looks brighteyed and expectant. In the second he looks like a tired businessman. You believe that China made Herbert Yardley sick.

And even if you don't believe him, he's such a good storyteller that you have to read him anyway. There are good punch lines even when anyway. There are good punch lines even when he's setting us up for an anecdote. There's also a poker game, and I'm stary to have to report that Yardley cheats in it by picking up exposed discards, memorizing the sequence of the cards and then giving the deck false shuffles. Buril was in a good cause. He was trying to wim money so that one of his interpreters could afford to inoculate his three older children against the diphthenia that his wronness comagainst the diphtheria that his youngest one had caught. Such medical hygiene was not something that an above-average Chinese wa carner could afford at that time.

The opener was an almost exact parallel to the games both these teams had in their playoff openers. Then, the Phillies started with a low-scoring victory on the road in a pitchers' duel that was decided by a home run — a I-O decision over Los Angeles. Similarly, the Orioles began the American League playoffs with a 2-1 defeat here. Then, as now, the hard-luck loser was Scott The Oriole left-hander sailed through the first five innings Tuesday giving up two singles on 55 pitches. No Phillie got to second base, not until there were two out with none ou in the sixth, when he

You know who you are, you know probably should have thrown it in Maddox's game-winning home run in the eighth, however, was completely unexpected. McGregor had been throwing him fastballs all oight, but this time Maddox opened up as if he'd guessed it was coming. Maddox hit the first pitch of the inning — a slightly above-the-kness fast ball — over the leftfield fence. It was his first home run in two months and only his fifth this season.

"Yeah, I was looking for it," Maddox said. "We knew he was a breaking-ball pitcher and he must have known we knew. He was throwing me a lot of fastballs."

Said McGregor: "That's how I'd gotten him before that. Why mess around? I'm not a guy who likes to mess around with hitters. . . . You're gonna guess right some-

And Rose added: "I've seen Joe do it so many times. A bigger thrill was Maddox. He'd really been crucified. You read the papers the next day, you'd thought he dropped a on a first-pitch pop-up to left field. That was as close as the Orioles ninth. Ken Singleton was crouch-ing in the on-deck circle when Gary Roenicke flied out to end the game, played from the start to finish in a mist and drizzle.

This Series as a whole may have difficulty being as interesting as its first inning. The initial Philadelphia batter, Morgan, hit a high pop-up to the center of the infield. A powerful right-to-left wind blew the ball several yards so that it came down directly between the mound and second base. Rich Dauer and Cal Ripken almost did not move since Todd Cruz appeared to be under the ball. For his part, Cruz looked like a fellow who might oever have been in a World Series before, or perhaps a chap who had played for six teams in the last six years and who had been released outright by the worst team in baseball just four months ago, Cruz's head flicked in every direction except up as he tried to figure out who was going to catch the hall.

Finally, it dawned on him. A staggering step, a last-second lunge and the ball had clanked off Cruz's usually soft glove and fallen for an Mike Schmidt, who had lined hard to center in his previous at bat, then hit a deep liner toward the 387-foot sign in right center where Al Bumbry made a running catch at the fence.

With two out and none on in the Phillies' sixth, McGregor was not so fortunate. He got ahead of 40year-old Morgan in the count, 1-2 However, in both his previous at hats, Morgan had proved a tough out with two strikes, fooling off four fast balls high in the strike

After all that high heat, McGregor tried a sweeping curve ball to the little lefty — the same pitch that Pittsburgh's Willie Stargell hit over the wall for a game-winning home run off McGregor in the seventh game of the '79 Series. Morgan got his arms extended and golfed a line drive toward the 376-foot sign. As Morgan's drive zipped over the fence, the Phillies leaped for joy in their dugout. The 1-1 tie did not last long. Like many a control pitcher, McGregor has a habit of starting many innings with a low fast ball strike. especially if the hitter is not a singger. It's a sort of neutral opening. Most batters take the first pitch, especially to lead off. Also, pitchers make good livings off batters who swing at such pitches.

On the other hand, in a 1-1 Series game, a hitter is glad to get any-thing that looks like a hittable pitch. When Maddox stepped to the place to open the eighth, McGregor hummed his fast ball, a couple of inches above the knees. A moment later, Maddox hit McGregor's pitch 10 rows up into the left field bleachers above the

"Free competition is what this country thrives on," I said.

"The only problem was that after they got deregulated, all the big boys wanted to fly the same routes. A company that used to fly to Charlotte, North Carolina, decided to fly to London instead. Every major company put on flights to Hawaii and canceled flights to mid-dle America. Instead of going to Missoula, Montana, one airline started a daily service to Tokyo.

"With all the competition for the major cities, the airlines got into a price war. First they cut their fares—then they offered you a free seat for your wife. Then they advertised you could take all your children with you. And finally, during the recession, they let you take all the people that you had met in a bar. There wasn't an empty seat on the plane, but there was only one paying passenger.

To make things worse, the little guys started taking on the big boys and price-cut the hell out of them. The little guys were nonunion, nofrill companies who offered you nothing but a seat. But for $39 you could fly from New York to Los Angeles with a layover in New-foundland."

"I guess the free market was real-

If you flew 15,000 miles they would let you sit in the co-pilot's seat. If you flew 100,000 miles they made you president of the company. Most of the people now running a losing airline came up through the ranks from the frequent flier' plan. To make things worse, the big boys guessed wrong on what planes they would need for their companies. Some ordered planes that were too big — others ordered planes that were too small. When they had too many planes in moth-balls, they had to sell a lot of them to the little guys who were putting them out of business. Of course it wasn't their fault. One of the major airline executives was walking through his terminal at Kennedy Airport and it was jammed with people. He immediately ordered six new 747s. What he didn't realize. until later, was that all the people there were from Central America,

Yves Montand, French Left at Odds

By John Vinocut New York Times Service

PARIS — On stage, Yves Montand offers audiences the extraordinary gift of a man at ease with himself. The voice is passion restrained, as relaxed as a walk in the sun.

The heat, the temper, the hard edges come elsewhere. In the last few months they have been part of the singer and actor's emergence at age 62 as a different kind of political player in France. He has said enough since midsummer to be attacked in Izvestia, the Soviet government newspaper, and for a public opinion survey group to announce last week that 55 percent of the French believe that what Montand, the showman, thinks about politics is more important than what the country's professionals say. He has said so much, in fact, that Le Matin, the Paris newspaper with the most direct ties to the Socialist government, wrote, "That's enough, Monsieur Mon-tand! Too much is too much, Monsieur Montand." The Communist Party called him a turncoat and found what it insisted was an African proverb to deal with his case: "The higher a monkey climbs the tree, the more he shows his bottom." There was more: The party dragged ont Montand's older brother, Julien, an employee of a branch of a Communist-led labor union, to say that Yves never worked much as a kid, liked to give a more "diversified" picture of his youth in poverty than reality would allow, and has taken on the "false vocation of somebody who thinks he can talk about everything with total self-assurance." Once a working-class, leftist hero, the entertainer has become a problematical figure for some of his old friends.

Highly compressed, what Montand has been saying is that the Soviet Union is a brutal and aggrandizing state, that many people in the West refuse to understand this or to defend themselves against it, that French intervenion in Chad was necessary but came too late, that the leadership of the French Communist Party is full of people who have been around since the time of Stalin and Beria, and that the > Coming from Jacques Chirac, the Gaullist mayor of Paris, this would intrigue no one. Set next to the name Yves Montand, the words have a different sense in this country. As an unusual entertainer, a man whose greatest skill may be his entrapment of an an-dience in a kind of elegant complicity, Montand has found out he can reach people whose ears turn to wood for most politicians. As a man who has been associated with the left for decades, he now realizes he possesses a par-ticular weight as a symbol of been deep. In the 1950s, Montand was close to the Communist Party, a signer of its petitions and an entertainer so welcome in Prague and Moscow that, as editorialists here often remind him, he met with Nikita S. Khrushchev. The party's influence on him, he acknowledges now, was so strong that he dropped songs from his repertoire because it didn't like them. He became same thing." The turnaround began in 1956. If his politics changed fully 25 years ago, the difference now is that Montand says he no longer is paying attention to all those peo-ple on the left who told him that speaking too frankly meant he was helping the right, the people for whom he had always felt so much contempt.

"It's like this," he says, hunting for explanation. "I was always against intolerance, injustice and humiliation. That hasn't changed a bit. But for a long time people didn't say certain things they knew. You couldn't go over the line. It all appears so clear to me now that I say, 'No, I'm sorry, here's the truth.'

The problem with French pohitical life and its reaction to his feelings, he goes on, is that it still thinks in 1930s terms: Everything is divided into a left-right equa-tion. "That's old-fashioned and exhausting, all this right or left stuff. But there are just obvious things that need to be said."

The entertainer, who has a film coming out this month and plans to tour Europe next year with his one-man show, insists he is not going to become a politician. But he may break his political rule of the last 10 or 15 years of refusing to give his support to a single political figure. It will probably not be François Mitterrand. Montand respects 90 percent of the president's foreign policy "clear and courageous," says), but he cannot accept his alliance with Georges Marchais Haraichi Kawanura, 36, and Shomi Suzaki, 30, made their conquest Saturday through a route that has been climbed only once, by a British team in 1975, said Herman Warth, head of the German Volunteers in Nepal. Kawamura became the second man to climb the three highest mountains in the world, equaling a re-cord of the Italian alpinist Reluhold Messner. A Sherpa guide who ac-companied the Japanese was reported missing. Warth said, however, the southwest face was not exposed to the winds as is the west ridge route being attempted by an American expedition, which began its climb Aug. 24, 12 days ahead of the Japanese. Four American climbers, including two women and two men, will make their second attempt on the peak of the 29,028foot mountain Thursday. Their first try was foiled by strong jetstreams lashing the peak.

Fons Oerlemans, of Belgium, said they all langhed when he and his Dutch wife, Margaretha Arens, set off from New York City to cross the Atlantic in a Dodge truck. After a 3,000-mile "drive" on the high seas they arrived wet, weary and victorious in Lisbon. "Not bad for victorious in Lisbon. "Not bad for a truck," Oerlemans, 45, quipped from the raft he had specially de-signed to keep the British-built, diesel-powered van afloat during the journey, which started Aug. 17. The former engineer said there were no major mishaps on the trip, although hurricane-force winds off the U.S. coast forced them to turn off their engine and drift for two nights in rough seas. They stopped for two weeks in the Azores so Oerlemans could he treated for minor burns and stayed an extra week to rest. Steering from the van's cab. the couple took turns at the wheel in two-hour shifts during the crossing. They used radios to monitor shipping and keep in touch with friends on shore. The drive shaft of the truck, with its 115-horsepower engine, was linked to the raft a propeller. Navigation was done by sex-tant. The couple scrapped plans to continue by sea to Amsterdam.
